

Know the ropes?

adult training

- Do you often find yourself giving advice to others in Scouting?
- Do you feel able to help another adult in Scouting fulfil their learning needs?
- Would you like others to benefit from your Scouting knowledge and experience?

If so, then maybe you are the right person to be a Training Adviser.

In many ways, this new role holds the key to the success of the Adult Training Scheme. Training Advisers offer both support and guidance to those working towards their Wood Badge and help ensure that individual training needs are met. The Training Adviser is also responsible for assessing whether an individual has successfully completed the modules that make up the Scheme. The role is designed so that it can be held in addition to your other roles in Scouting.
